Plans for the 275th anniversary of Fairfield celebration to be held on September 25 and 26 are to be completed at a meeting of the Fairfield Historical society under whose auspices it is to be held. The celebration is to be the most pretentious ever attempted in the town, but as yet few of the details have been arranged, and because of this, those in charge refuse to give but limited information.

A colonial ball, to be held in Wheeler's hall, is to be the main event of the celebration. The hall is to be decorated in old colonial style, while those attending will be attired in colonial costumes. A large representation of Fairfield's most prominent residents are enrolled in the Fairfield Historical society and they promise that the celebration will never be forgotten by the residents.

The Sunday preceding the celebration, the First Church of Christ, one of the oldest established churches in the country, will have its 250th anniversary. Dr. Childs, pastor of the church, stated today that while everything will be done to make it a memorable affair, plans have not as yet been completed.

It is expected that at the two days' celebration of the town, Governor Baldwin and ex-President Taft will be present. Invitations will be sent them and as they have already expressed their desire to attend, arrangements are being made for their welcome. A number of other notables will be present.

And he took out a segar and litt it and just then anuthir car calm alawing.

Thats rite, sho up wen I dont want you, sed pop. And he throo the segar in the slip and went out to the car track to let the car no it was apposed to stop, ony the car kepp rite awn going past as if it didnt no it.

Well Im a hecker if ill stand this any lawngir, sed pop, there gos a good segar and anuthir car both at the same time, Ive got a good mind to report sumbody for this.

May be the brakes wont werk, I sed.

Will you shut up with yure maybes, sed pop. And we wated there and 3 moar cars went past as if noboddy was standng there wating, then there arms wich sumbody was, beeing pop, and then a messngir boy wawked past, saying, haw, mister, yure not wating heer for a car, are you.

Wat do you think Im doing, looking for to-morrer mornings sunrise, sed pop.

Well, you mite as well, because the cars dont stop heer any moar, they stop awn the uthir kornit, sed the messngir boy.

Wich they do, because we went ovir to see, and the first wun that calm to me, Nichol, wich pop sed proves that evrything kums to him who wates, perviding he wates in the rite place.

RIVERS &amp; HARBORS TO PASS SENATE BEFORE CLOSURE

Washington, Aug. 4.—"The River and Harbor Appropriation bill will pass the Senate during the present session." This statement, made in the most unequivocal manner by Senator P. M. Simmons, of North Dakota, the chairman of the powerful Finance Committee and acting chairman of the Committee on Commerce, which prepared the waterway budget, gives a new angle to what has been regarded by the friends of river and harbor improvements as a very serious situation for the bill.

"The opposition to the river and harbor bill," continued Senator Simmons, "is confined to a relatively small number of the senators. The large majority of the senators feel that it is of the utmost public importance that the bill should pass and they have expressed themselves to me in no uncertain terms."

"This with no reference whatever to party prejudices."

"Almost ever since I entered the Senate I have been a member of the Commerce Committee and have taken an interest in the river and harbor bill passed since my election to the upper branch of Congress, and I can say without fear of contradiction that no day has been so profitably spent by me as the day I have spent in the Commerce Committee on the one hand and in the Senate on the other."

"There are some items in every bill that may be subject to criticism from the standpoint of the character of the government undertaking, I am satisfied, however, that there are but few items in the present river and harbor bill that are subject to the criticisms spoken of."

"It is true that the total appropriation carried in the bill is larger than usual, but there is a well-founded demand in the country for a broader policy on the part of the government for the improvement of our waterways, a demand justified by the high consideration of a sound public policy."

"The large part of the river and harbor bill is for improvement of our harbors both on the Atlantic and Pacific seaboard, and on the Great Lakes, including the river approaches to these harbors. It is a well known fact that our harbors have not been improved as they should have been and that the opening of the Panama Canal imposes upon Congress the duty of greater activity and liberality in the improvement of these harbors."

"The bill deals more liberally with the Mississippi river than other bills, but it is felt that this wise policy is imperatively demanded by the country which has been emphasized by the disastrous floods of recent years."

"The bill deals more liberally with the intercoastal system of waterways than former bills, but this is a scheme that has been thoroughly thought out, and which sentiment has been crystallized."

"Some persons have criticized projects in the bill located in distant sections of the country, but these persons have no knowledge of projects located in their immediate vicinity. The small projects in the bill, when all the facts are known, compare favorably in importance, within the territory affected, with the larger projects."

"The failure of the present river and harbor bill, would, within a few months, stop work on more than half the projects provided for on the Mississippi river and its tributaries to a large extent, cease. The Mississippi river system would be almost abandoned and great damage would be done to the machinery employed upon the waterways."

"I have tried to keep in close touch with the Senate throughout this session, and, knowing the sentiment that prevails as to the merits of the river and harbor bill, I feel confident that the bill will pass this session of Congress."
